MINNESOTA

Admitted as a State, May, 1858. Area—34,682 square miles.
Capital—St. Paul.

Population. Each recurring census shows a constantly increasing population. Ramsey County containing the city of St. Paul, has a greater number of persons to the square mile than any other county; Cook County, in the extreme northeast, has the smallest number.

History. The earliest known European explorers in the Minnesota region were Radisson and Groseilliers, French trappers, who visited the Mille Lacs district in 1659-1660. In 1671 a proclamation was read to the representatives of fourteen Indian nations, asserting French authority in the Great Lakes region, and in 1686 Nicholas Perrot took formal possession of the region in the name of the French king. No permanent settlement, however, was made for more than a century, the region being frequented only by fur-trappers and traders.

After 1763 the land east of the Mississippi was ceded to the English, and after the Revolution in turn to the United States. The part west of the Mississippi became United States territory after the purchase of Louisiana from the French. Up to 1848 the two regions east and west of the Mississippi River formed part of various territories of the upper Mississippi Valley as they were organized. With the creation of Wisconsin and Iowa, the district now included in Minnesota was finally left without jurisdiction; and in 1849 the Territory was formed with the present State boundaries and including half of North and South Dakota. In 1858 the Territory was admitted to the Union as a State with its present boundaries, the thirty-second State admitted.

The first permanent settlement was made in 1826, by refugees from a settlement of Swiss in North Dakota, near Fort Snelling. The fort had been established in 1819.

Topography. The southern and central portions of the State are occupied by rolling prairies forming part of the Prairie Plains Province. North and east are the remains of a worn-down mountain system, with ridges of hard rock which have resisted erosion. In the northwest the sediments left in the old Lake Agassiz have formed a remarkably level valley floor along the Red River, little dissected by streams. About 10,000 lakes have been left scattered over the State by glacial action, from one of which the Mississippi River has its rise.

In the southwestern counties, the "Coteau des Prairies" crosses the State, with an altitude of 1,700 feet. Where the Red River crosses the Canadian border, an elevation of 788 feet is reached.

Climate. Minnesota climate has the dryness which is characteristic of the North-Central States, and which considerably modifies the effect of the severe winter cold. The mean annual temperature is 45° Fahr. at St. Paul, and 37° in the north.

The rainfall decreases from east to west, an annual precipitation of 33.3 inches being recorded in the southeast, and less than 25 inches in the west. The snowfall is heavy all over the State.

Soil. In the southeast where the surface has not been glaciated, soft, silty loams prevail. In the south and the southwest, are brown and black silt loams over the prairies, with areas of dark-colored, somewhat stony loams in the timber regions. North and east are sandy and gravelly outwash soils, the stony ridges being thinly covered. Around the extremity of Lake Superior are red clays and clay loam areas. The Red River Valley soils in the lower-lying areas are brown to black clay loams and clays, with the margins more loamy or sandy.

Mineral Resources. The mining of iron ore is of great importance. The output is chiefly red hematite, the deposits being found in the iron ranges in the northeastern part of the State. Mesabi Range is the most productive iron range in the world. The Vermilion Range is also exceedingly rich. The ore lies very near the surface, making mining operations simple and inexpensive. A conservative estimate places the amount of high-grade ore in Minnesota at 2,000,000,000 tons. The State produces over 60 per cent of all the iron ore of the country. The ore is shipped by boat to Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania for smelting and manufacture.

The quarries of the State produce large quantities of building stone, granite, sandstone, and limestone. Large beds of sand, gravel, and clay furnish abundant materials for brickmaking and the manufacture of clay products.

Agriculture. Minnesota is one of the great cereal-producing states of the Union, the leading grains being corn, wheat, and oats. The cereals combined make up about three-fifths of the crop value of the State. The chief cereals besides those already mentioned are barley, rye, and buckwheat. In the quantity of sweet corn raised for canning Minnesota is surpassed only by Illinois and Iowa. Other important crops are hay and forage, potatoes, grains and seeds other than cereals, principally flaxseed, vegetables, flowers, plants, and nursery products, fruit and nuts, small fruits, and sorghum and maple sugar and sirup.

Apples are the leading orchard fruits, others being comparatively incon siderable.

Large numbers of milk cows and other cattle, swine, sheep, and horses are raised on the farms.

In the northern portion of the State, there are still considerable areas of uncultivated land.

Forests. The State formerly ranked high in lumber output, but there has been a marked decrease in production since 1908, and its cut in 1931 amounted to approximately 95,000,000 feet, including white pine, spruce, birch, larch, cottonwood, and balsam. Much wood pulp is also made.

Manufactures. Excellent transportation facilities, immense water-power, and great natural resources have made the manufactures of considerable and growing importance in Minnesota. Minneapolis is the greatest flour-making center in the world, and the State ranks high also in dairy products. Other flourishing industries are the manufacture of lumber and timber products, slaughtering and meat-packing, the manufacture of butter, cheese, and condensed milk, foundry and machine shops, railroad shops, lined oil factories, woolen goods, leather, boots and shoes, brick, and lime. Immense water power is utilized for manufactures at the International Falls and on the St. Louis River at Duluth.

Places of Interest. Minneapolis, with its fine parks and boulevards, its broad and well-kept streets and beautiful homes, is one of the most attractive cities of the Middle West. The capitol building at St. Paul is one of the most beautiful of its kind in the United States. Connected closely by rail with both cities is delightful Lake Minnetonka. The State University, with an enrollment of about 6,000 students, is located at Minneapolis.

One of the most striking scenic features of the State is the multitude of beautiful lakes scattered in nearly every portion. At Mankato is Minnesota State Park, with its wonderful waterfall. Hibbing, in the northeast, is one of the largest-producing iron-ore camps in the world.
